Annexure – I Details of Program in Full

The main objective of the proposed short term training program is to spread the awareness on the advancements in the field of concrete technology. Cement concrete is the largest used construction material in the world. Properties of the concrete would mainly govern the life-cycle performance of any of the infrastructure project. As infrastructure development is very important for the developing nations like India, it is really important to bring advancements in the field of construction industry. Having this motivation, it is proposed to organize one-week training program covering topics on advancements in the field of concrete technology for M.Tech & PhD Students, Faculty members and Practicing engineers working in the field of construction engineering-especially in concrete technology.

Conventionally, Cement concrete is made up of cement, aggregate, water, chemical & mineral admixtures and sometimes supplementary cementitious materials. Plain cement concrete possesses high compressive strength but very limited tensile and bending strength. To improve these properties, to bring the sustainability (as conventional ingredients of concrete are not eco-friendly) and for specific engineering purposes, some modern materials and alternate methods of concreting are available which are said to be better in terms of performance than those of conventional options. To address the present challenges of the concrete industries and to spread the awareness on advancements in this area, following major topics would be covered in the proposed STTP:

- Performance Oriented Mix Proportioning Approaches
- Geopolymer Concrete State of Art
- Bendable Concrete Composition and Uses
- Self-Healing Concrete
- Research results on Supplementary Cementitious Materials for Concrete
- Applications of Permeable Concrete
- Graphene based Nano-engineered Concrete
- Ultra-High-Performance Concrete
- Precast Concrete: Production, Design and Applications
- Structural Auditing
- Building Repair and Rehabilitation Case Studies
- Advances in Chemical Admixtures
- Engineering Marvel Statue of Unity (Construction Challenges and Materials)
